The Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) is one of the institutes of the Spanish National Research Council (CSIC) in the area of social sciences. It is located in Madrid. CSIC is the largest public research institution in Spain and the third largest in Europe, with more than 120 research institutes in all scientific areas distributed throughout Spain.

IPP research focuses on the comparative analysis and understanding of the nature of public goods, the design and implementation of public policies, and the interaction of both, seeking to contribute to the advancement of our knowledge about the relation between society, markets and the State.

Research projects are funded from national and international sources, notably competitive national R&D and European Framework projects, as well as research contracts and agreements with public and private institutions. IPP tenured researchers, post-doctoral researchers, PhD students, together with technical and support staff aim at producing knowledge valued by the international scientific community but also relevant to other social actors, including firms, civil society associations, institutions and governments.

The Institute integrates six research groups: i) Environmental Economics, ii) Rural Geography, iii) Citizens, Institutions and Policy, iv) Social Policies and Welfare State, v) Systems and Policies for Research and Innovation, and vi) Scientometrics.

The group studies environmental public goods, focusing on both the valuation of these assets and their management at national or international level. The main areas of interest are forests and land use, renewable energies and climate change, and the main methods used are ecosystem accounting, discrete choice methods and applied game theory.

Other members of the group (non-permanent researchers):

PhD: Itziar Ruíz de Gauna, Cristina Peñasco (2011-2014)

Postdoc: Paola Ovando Pol (currently at Swiss Federal Institute for Aquatic Science and Technology, Eawag)

Research assistants: Eloy Almazán Riballo, Alejandro Álvarez Palomino, María Fernández Lorenzo (currently at Merlin Properties), Cristina Fernández Vega (currently at Banco de España), Soledad Marta Letón Rojo, Bruno Mesa Gutiérrez, Ignacio Rivero Aparicio (currently consultant), Nuria Ruiz Ruiz

Research trainees: Adrián Caballero Castillejo (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid), Troy J. Shirley (Carestream), Luke Elder (Candidate at Yale University)

Citizens have growing ability to participate in public life, whilst, at the same time there is a parallel evidence of disconnection and even dissatisfaction with traditional mechanism of political participation. Issues of accessibility, accountability and transparency dominate the agenda of the relationship between citizens and elites.

From a comparative perspective, the group POSEB (Políticas Sociales y Estado del Bienestar) carries out research on social policies and the Welfare State. It focuses on reforms and their impact on citizens' life courses in democratic post-industrial societies. A major area of study is the recalibration of responsibilities (regulation, financing, provision) between State, markets and civil society in the articulation of both the productive and reproductive dimensions.

MEDIA

- Knowledge transfer by means of collaborating with the media and actively participating in public debates is a priority for the POSEB research group. Whenever possible, findings produced with the carrying out of POSEB research activities are shared with the general public via national and international media, as well as digital platforms and social networks. Most of the topics dealt with in media sources have concerned the effects of the economic crisis unleashed in 2007—08, particularly as regards welfare retrenchment and the development of the European Social Model.
- During the period 2011-14, POSEB members have published more than 50 articles of opinion and Op-eds, among others, in the following national newspapers and blogs: Agenda Pública - El Diario, Catalunya Press, The Economy Journal, El País, Heraldo de Aragón, London School of Economics Europe blog, El Periódico, Press Digital, Público, UK Centre on Constitutional Change.
- Radio and TV interviews have also been broadcasted by: BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation), Catalunya Radio, Radio France Internationale, Radio Nacional de España, Cadena SER, STV (Scottish Television), TN Internacional-Canal 13 (Argentinian radio network), La Sexta, TVE, Telemadrid.
- Inputs have also been provided by POSEB members for the preparation of media reports to the request of the following: Agence France Press (French international news agency), ABC (Australia TV network), China's Caixin Media (Chinese nationwide media organization), Courrier Internationale - Le Monde (French media network), Helsingin Sanomat (Finnish newspaper), El Progreso (Galicia newspaper), El Punt Avui (Catalan daily newspaper), Faro de Vigo (Galicia daily newspaper), La Vanguardia (Catalan daily newspaper), L'Espresso (Italian weekly magazine), New America (Washington DC based think-tank, Pravda (Slovakian newspaper), Sputnik (Russian global online publication), Televisa (Mexican multimedia company).

The objective of the group is to achieve a better and deeper understanding of the role played by science, technology and innovation in modern economies and societies, by developing our capabilities to map and measure – tacit, codified or embodied in people-scientific and technological knowledge, as well as to contribute to the construction of a “science of science policy”. We aim to increase our knowledge of the interactions between political, economic and social processes and the activities of production, communication, transfer, and use of knowledge. The research activities integrate the work of well-established fields and disciplines and combine different traditions of theoretical and empirical research that today address the understanding of science and technology dynamics and their interactions with politics, society and the economy.

SYSTEMS AND POLICIES FOR RESEARCH AND INNOVATION

Work is organized in various transversal axes:

- Actors and Strategies, Institutions and Organizations. Research centres, universities, firms, research groups, and researchers, and even public and political actors, are essential players in the knowledge system. Understanding the internal functioning of these actors, their adaptation strategies to new environments and their interactions in the processes of knowledge production, transfer and use, are key dimensions of the research line, as is gaining a better understanding of the impact of regulations and legal norms on the incentives that actors have for knowledge production, diffusion and use. Mobility of researchers, including academic promotion, is also elements of the way in which institutions and systems are shaped and reproduced. Science and Industry relationships are conditioned by general incentives and strategic choices; also the emergence of knowledge networks has become a structural feature of new knowledge systems.
- Impact and interactions between science and society, between knowledge and the economy. The production, diffusion and use of knowledge take place in society in general and the economy in particular. The production of scientific and technological knowledge and their protection through intellectual property rights, patents in particular, have an impact on our societies by contributing to innovation and socio-economic development. The commercialization of knowledge and technological transfer, as well as the incorporation of highly qualified experts in firms are some of the standard modes of enhancing the socio-economic impact of R&D.
- Evaluation of science, institutions and policies. Evaluation processes and practices play an essential role in the functioning of knowledge systems and policies. Evaluation refers to multiple dimensions: scientific activity, scientific journals and other means of disseminating research results, research and innovation policies and programs, institutions, organizations, and individuals. Assessing the socio-economic impact of science and improving the methodologies used in research assessment processes are also central parts of the research objectives.
- Science communication, knowledge diffusion and public engagement as well as public understanding of science and interactions between science, civil society and the public. A better understanding of the way and the consequences of how knowledge is produced, communicated, protected and diffused is another key challenge for understanding the dynamics of science. Science as an institution has become a significant element in democratic governance as scientists' advice has become integrated in the regular policy process. The interaction between science or knowledge and the public is an essential element for understanding how science and knowledge is absorbed and adapted by citizens.

Web IPP: <http://www.ipp.csic.es/en/personal/pablo.campos>

Pablo Campos Palacín is Ph.D. in Economics from University Complutense of Madrid (1983). Lecturer in Applied Economics at University Complutense of Madrid (1981-1986). Visiting scholar at centres specialising in the economics of sustainable management of natural resources, invited by prestigious researchers in the field of sustainability of the use of natural resources at College of Natural Resources at University of California/Berkeley (2001), Centre for Social and Economic Research on Global Environment (CSERGE) at University College London (1991), London Environmental Economics Centre at University College London (1990) and Centre for Agricultural Strategy at Reading University (1989 y 1990). Member and twice-elected president (2002-2008) of Europe's first regional scientific Spanish-Portuguese Association of Environmental and Resource Economics (AERNA: www.aerna.org). Member of the London Group on Environmental Accounting: <http://unstats.un.org/unsd/envaccounting/londongroup/>. Associated Editor of Forest Systems.

His main research work pursues to develop a green methodology for extending the conventional system of national accounts (SNA) with the objective of including the value of the environmental services supplied by the natural ecosystems to the total sustainable income (TSI) measured in a territory. That objective has been applied in his research projects for valuing economic multiple lands uses in Mediterranean climate regions, leading to an undergoing new methodology of agroforestry accounts system (AAS).

ALEJANDRO CAPARRÓS

Senior Research Fellow (Investigador Científico)

More information:

Web IPP: <http://www.ipp.csic.es/es/personal/alejandro.caparros>

Personal web: <https://alejandrocaparros.wordpress.com/>

Alejandro Caparrós is the Director of the Institute for Public Goods since 2015. He holds a PhD in Economics from the University Complutense in Madrid and an LL.M in Law. He is also lecturer at the University Carlos III in Madrid, since 2005. Previously, he was post-doc at the CNRS in Paris and lecturer at the University Paris Est. He has been visiting professor at the Universities of Berkeley, Paris II, Paris Est, Bordeaux, Göttingen, Exeter and Bath.

His research is focused on the micro-economic analysis of environmental public goods. His current research is focused on international environmental agreements and game theory, analyzing the formation of environmental agreements using multilateral bargaining theory. He is also interested in the aggregation of stated contributions to public goods and, in particular, in its use in spatial green accounting. Finally, he has worked on the regulation of pollution and public goods such as carbon sequestration or biodiversity.

Among other journals, he has published in American Journal of Agricultural Economics, Journal of the Association of Environmental and Resource Economists, Land Economics, Public Choice, Environmental and Resource Economics, Ecological Economics, Environmental and Development Economics, Journal of Forest Economics, Journal of Forest Policy and Economics, Climatic Change, Journal of Environmental Planning and Management, Rationality and Society or Energy Policy.

PhD in Economics (Universidad de Zaragoza, 1998), and former PhD student at University of Sheffield, (UK). She is a permanent member of the Group of Environmental Economic Analysis (GEA).

Her research focus is on environmental economics and the main topics she has been working on are:

- Valuation of environmental goods and services: methods, techniques, models, etc., with special emphasis in stated preference methods.
- Valuation process and formation of preferences.
- Experimental economics and psychology.

PhD in Economics (Universidad de Cádiz, 2007), and former PhD student at the Institute of Economics and Geography (IEG), CSIC. He is research fellow at IPP-CSIC working in the Group of Environmental Economic Analysis (GEA), and a collaborator of the Rangeland Ecology Group of the University of California, Berkeley.

His research work focuses on the econometric analysis of methodological and applied aspects of discrete choice experiments. The empirical context of this research covers three fields: (i) the application of stated preferences techniques for the valuation of environmental public goods for their integration in ecosystem accounting; (ii) the econometric analysis of revealed and stated preferences in land use models; and (iii) laboratory experiments for the analysis of cognitive and decision processes that allow for a better understanding and application of these techniques applied to the valuation of public goods. This research is developed in the economic analysis of Mediterranean forest and rangelands (Spain, California, Portugal and Tunisia) and it is being explored for coastal wetlands.

PABLO DEL RÍO

Research Fellow (Científico Titular)

More information:

Web IPP: <http://www.ipp.csic.es/en/personal/pablo.delrio>

Pablo holds a PhD in Environmental Economics (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid), a M.Sc. in Economics and Business (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid) and a B.Sc in Law (Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia).

Previously, he was a lecturer for a decade at the Department of Economics and Business of the University of Castilla-La Mancha where he gave lectures on Environmental Economics (Faculty of Environmental Sciences) and Econometrics (Faculty of Economics). In addition, he was vicedean for external relationships at the Faculty of Economics.

His main areas of research are at the cross-road of Energy Economics, Environmental Economics and Innovation Economics. In particular, he has done extensive research on the analysis of support schemes for renewable electricity, the interactions of climate and renewable energy policies and on the drivers to eco-innovation in industry, the energy sector and transport.

He has actively participated in six European-funded projects on renewable energy promotion support schemes in the EU since 1999 (IntraCert, Admire-Rebus, Green-X, Beyond2020, Towards2030 and AURES) as well as three other international projects on climate change mitigation funded by the EU and other institutions (see details below).

He has almost a hundred international publications, 75 peer-reviewed of which are articles in international journals, 12 Chapters in leading international publishers, two coauthored books in leading international publishers and several policy reports for international institutions. In addition, he has two coauthored books in Spanish publishers and more than 30 articles in peer-reviewed Spanish journals.

Carlos Closa Montero is Professor at the IPP-CSIC. He holds a Ph.D. in Politics, and a M.A. in European integration and cooperation by the University of Hull (UK). He is currently chair of the IPSA Research Committee on European Unification and co-editor of European Political Science Review (EPSR) (ECPR) and Program Associated at the Global Governance Programme, RSCAS-EUI, where he has been the Director of the research area European, Transnational and Global Governance until December 2015. Previously, he has been Deputy Director at the Centre for Political and Constitutional Studies (CEPC), Madrid and member of the Venice Commission for Democracy through Law of the Council of Europe. He was formerly Senior Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Zaragoza (Spain) and lecturer at the Universidad Complutense de Madrid.

He has been Jean Monnet Fellow at the European University Institute (EUI), Florence, Visiting Fellow at the Centre for European Studies (Harvard University), Visiting Professor at the College of Europe (Bruges) and Emile Noël Fellow at the Jean Monnet Centre, NYU and Visting Proferssor at the University of Groningen (the Netherlands), the University of Maastricht (the Netherlands) and the Università degli Studi Suor Orsola Benincasa (Naples, Italy). He is member of the Scientific Board of the Real Instituto Elcano de Estudios Internacionales y Estratégicos (RIE).

As consultant, he has collaborated with the European Commission (DG Justice, Freedom and Security), the UN Programme for Development (UNDP) in Iraq (UNAMI) and the Friedrich Neumann Foundation on advising on constitution-making in Iraq and territorial decentralization in Thailand; he has also participated in a Council of Europe programme for capacity building involving national parliamentarians in Serbia and Montenegro and with the Spanish Cooperation Agency (AECID) in formation and training on regional integration in Latin America, decentralization processes in the Andean area and formation of parliamentarians.

He also collaborated with the EU Commission and the Council of Europe in a project on the implementation of the Constitution of Bolivia. He collaborates usually with the Real Instituto Elcano de Estudios Internacionales y Estratégicos and the Fundación Alternativas, where he has published several policy papers, with the Foundation Notre Europe, the EU Committee of Regions and with the Bureau of Policy Advisers (BEPA) of the President of the European Commission.

He has published a large number of articles (in Spanish, English and Italian) on EU citizenship, the EU constitutional structure and the relationship with the Member States in journals such as Common Market Law Review, Journal of European Integration, Law and Philosophy, Comparative European Politics or the Revista de Estudios Políticos(in Spanish).

Main research interest refers to institutional design (how and why institutions are created and what are their effects). I usually work on EU related issues, on EU constitutionalism, EU institutions, etc. In the last years, I have developed a parallel research strand on Comparative regional integration, looking at institutional design and institutional effects in regional organizations across the globe.

She has held teaching positions at the Universidad Rey Juan Carlos (URJC, 1995-2007) where she taught political science and public administration, and at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (2007-2009) where she taught welfare state as invited professor. She has been visiting researcher or fellow at the Centre d'Études et de la Recherche sur la Vie Locale (CNRS), Institut d' Etudes Politiques in Bordeaux (2004), at the School of Social Policy and Social Research at the University of Kent, UK (2008), at the School of Political Studies at the University of Ottawa (2014). She usually teaches in several postgraduate programs at INAP, CEPC and IUOG.

She has acted as reviewer for several international journals and been the managing editorial secretary of the Revista Española de Ciencia Política. She has been co-director of the Master's Degree in International Relations and Cooperation with Latin America (URJC).

She has directed the Observatory for the Quality of Public Services in the National Agency for the Evaluation of Public Policies (AEVAL) in the Spanish Ministry of Territorial Policy and Public Administration.

Much of her recent research has dealt with the political conditions for reform of the welfare state and social policies. She has also published on various topics related to public management, citizen participation, the reform of administration and public policies. In this field, the main area of specialization has been citizens' attitudes towards the State, public services and employees and toward different levels of government as well as attitudes towards public spending.

Researcherid <http://www.researcherid.com/rid/F-2320-2013>

PhD in Political Science and Sociology at the Complutense University of Madrid (1983). Research Professor and Director of the CSIC Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) (2004-2015). Member of the CSIC Scientific Advisory Board (2004-2008). Chair of the OECD Committee of Scientific and Technological Policy (CSTP) (2007-2015). Previously, lecturer and assistant professor at the Complutense School of Political Science and Sociology and visiting scholar and research associated at the Institute of International Studies IIS/BRIE, University of California at Berkeley; Center for Science, Technology and Society (CWTS), University of Twente; Centre de Sociologie de la Innovation (CSI), Ecole des Mines de Paris; Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana-Xochimilco (UAM-X); School of Public Policy, Georgia Institute of Technology (Atlanta); School of Public and International Affairs, University of Georgia (Athens); School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado (Denver); School of Public Affairs and Administration, Rutgers University, Newark.

His research interests focus in science, technology and innovation policies, especially from a comparative perspective. He has worked on the institutional and organizational aspects of the research systems, R&D centers and universities, and on human resources for S&T, research careers and the construction of indicators for R&D. He also has worked on the role of the research evaluation and foresight, and Parliamentary technology assessment.

He has published more than a hundred academic works on research actors and systems and on science, technology and innovation policies, in books, book chapters and journals [e.g. PLOS ONE, Nature Medicine, Public Understanding of Science, Research Policy, Science and Public Policy, Scientometrics, Technological Forecasting and Social Change, Research Evaluation, Regional Studies, International Journal of Technology Management, International Studies on Management and Organization, etc.]. His research activities have been funded by different Spanish National R&D Plans, the European Union R&D Framework Programs, Governments from third countries and international organizations (OECD, EC, COST, UNESCO, IDB, etc.).

He also has been involved in international scientific societies [Board member of the European Association for the Study of Science and Technology (EASST), or Board members of the Research Committee 23 (Sociology of Science and Technology) of the International Sociological Association (ISA)].

He has research managerial experience [e.g. Deputy Director General for Planning and Monitoring in the State Secretariat for Scientific and Technology Policy at the Ministry of Science and Technology (2000-2002)] and has played advisory roles to the different Governments and international organizations in science and technology policies [e.g. member of the Scientific Board of the Spanish Foundation for Science and Technology (FECYT), member of the GRENCYT, that elaborated the National Strategy for Science and Technology (2008-2015)].

He also has played a role of in International expert Groups for international organizations [EU High Level Group (HLG) on “Benchmarking of National RTD policies, Excellence and Networking of National RTD Programmes”; EU Expert Group on the “The future of key actors in the European Research Area” or EU Expert Group on “Rationales for the European Research Area”], and international evaluation panels [evaluation of COST framework for S&T cooperation, evaluation of UNESCO Basic Science Networks in Latin America, Evaluation Panel of COST, Chair of the International Independent Panel for the Evaluation of the Mexican Research, Development and Innovation Policy (2001-2006), or Chair of the International Panel for the Evaluation of the activities of the Foro Consultivo Científico y Tecnológico de México (2014)].

ORCID: <http://orcid.org/0000-0002-9786-6251>

She is the Head of the Department of Science and Innovation of the IPP . She holds a PhD in Sociology from the Autonomous University of Madrid. She was a Marie Curie fellow and a Juan March Institute fellow during her doctoral studies. From 1999 to 2003 she was lecturer at the Sociology Department of the University Carlos III of Madrid. In the recent years, she has been visiting researcher at the University of Oxford at Nuffield College, at the School of Public Policy in the Georgia Institute of Technology (Atlanta) at the University of Georgia (Athens), and at Rutgers University (Newark).

Her area of Expertise focuses on research, higher education and innovation policies. Comparative studies on S&T policies, with especial attention to the role of human resources, the functioning of research labour markets, academic careers, and the relationship between higher education and research policy. Public research organisations and their responses to changes in the S&T funding system, and regional science policies in comparative perspective have also been issues of her interest.

Her research has been funded by competitive sources such as the EU R&D Framework Programmes and several Spanish National R&D Plans, being the Principal investigator of various projects. She has been involved in European Commission Experts Groups, and OECD Working Groups in the area of her expertise. She has also collaborated with the FECYT and COTEC Foundations in the context of national and international policy advice and science policy evaluation exercises . She regularly supervises the work of doctoral students and postdocs in her research group.

In the past, she has been member of various scientific boards, such as the Board of the Research Committee of Sociology of Science and Technology of the International Sociological Association (ISA), or the Bureau of the Working Group about Research Institutions and Human Resources (RIHR) of the OECD. From 2011, She is member of the Governing Board of the Spanish Agency for the Evaluation and Quality of Services (AEVAL).

She has published chapters in international edited volumes and scientific articles in international journals like :Research Policy, Regional Studies, Research Evaluation, International Studies of Management and Organization (ISMO), Journal of Technology Transfer, Journal of Contemporary European Research, Science and Public Policy, Scientometrics, Technological Forecasting and Social Change, PLOS one, etc.

ADELLHEID HOLL

Research Fellow (Científica Titular)

More information:

Personal webpage: <https://sites.google.com/site/adelheidholl/>

Adelheid Holl is a Research Fellow at the Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) since 2009. She was previously Ramón y Cajal Research Fellow at the Fundación de Estudios de Economía Aplicada (FEDEA, Madrid). Before that she worked as Lecturer in Urban and Regional Economics in the Department of Town and Regional Planning at the University of Sheffield, UK.

She holds a PhD in Town and Regional Planning from the University of Sheffield (2001), a MSc in Regional and Urban Planning Studies from the London School of Economics (1996), and a Magister Degree in Commerce from Vienna University of Economics and Business Administration (1994).

Her research is primarily at the intersection of applied micro-economic analysis and economic geography and concentrates on the location and spatial organisation of economic activity. Her recent research topics include: the effects of transportation infrastructure on firm location and productivity, the analysis of technology adoption in geographic space, and the impact of the economic crisis on innovation.

Her research appears in peer-reviewed journals such as the Journal of Urban Economics, Journal of Economic Geography, Regional Science and Urban Economics, Journal of Regional Science, Regional Studies, Papers in Regional Science, Journal of Transport Geography, Industry and Innovation, Science and Public Policy, and European Planning Studies.

Research Fellow at the Institute of Public Goods and Policies since 2006 and deputy director since 2015. BA in Economics from the University of Murcia (1992) and PhD in Economics from the Universidad Autónoma de Barcelona (1997) with the Programme of the International Doctorate in Economic Analysis (IDEA), as part of which she spent academic year 1995/96 with the Groupe de Recherche en Economie Mathématique et Quantitative (GREMAQ) of the University of Toulouse.

Between 1997 and 2000, she worked as economist at the London and Brussels offices of Lexecon Ltd, an economic consulting firm specialised in competition policy. In 1999 she obtained a postgraduate diploma in EC Competition Law at the Centre of European Law of King's College London. In 2000 she joined the OECD with the Young Professionals Programme at the Directorate for Science, Technology and Industry, and continued working in the same Directorate until 2006, when she moved back to Spain and joined CSIC.

She has taken part in numerous expert groups and committees about patents and innovation. She is member of the Comité Scientifique et de Prospective del Observatoire des Sciences et des Techniques in France since 2012; Consejo Científico y Tecnológico de la Fundación Española para la Ciencia y la Tecnología (FECYT) in Spain since 2015 and of the Board of the EPIP association (European Policy for Intellectual Property) also since 2015.

Between 2009 and 2013, she was member of the Steering Committee of the European Science Foundation (ESF) Research Networking Programme “Academic patenting in Europe: database sharing, applications and extensions” (APE-INV).

She has assisted the OECD in the review of the Intellectual Property System for innovation in Malaysia (2015); and the Chilean Patent and Trademark Office (INAPI) in the elaboration of the National Strategy for Industrial Property (2016).

Principal investigator of two projects funded by the Spanish Ministry of Economy and Competitiveness, “Academic inventors and science-industry linkages in Spain” (CSO2009-10845) and “Technology transfer: international evidence and lessons for research and innovation policy” (CSO2012-32844). She has published in international journals such as Research Policy; Scientometrics; Journal of Technology Transfer; Economics of Innovation and New Technology; Technology Analysis and Strategic Management; Industry and Innovation, Research Evaluation and World Patent Information.

Researchgate: https://www.researchgate.net/profile/Vincenzo_Pavone3

Academia.edu: <https://csic.academia.edu/VincenzoPavone>

With a background in political science and a master in politics and government, Vincenzo Pavone is a Doctor in Social and Political Science from the European University Institute (EUI) with a thesis on the impact of scientific humanism on the creation, developments and programmes of UNESCO. First lecturer in Politics and International Relations at the Mediterranean Centre for Arts and Sciences (MCAS), Siracusa (Italy), Vincenzo joined the Institute of Public Policies of the CSIC as a post-doctoral researcher in 2006.

At the IPP he has developed a research line in critical science and technology studies, with a special focus on the social and political implications of emerging technologies, such as surveillance-oriented security technologies, transgenics and cisgenics, as well as assisted reproductive technologies. Always working on the complex relationship between science, technology and politics, with a special focus on neoliberalism, Vincenzo has recently opened a new research line on the global bioeconomy.

In these past ten years at the IPP he has been principal investigator of two national projects on assisted reproductive technologies and regenerative medicine (BBE-GEN 1997-2010 and BIOARREME 2012-2015), two EU funded projects on public and civil society engagement in science, PSx2 (FP6, 2007-2008) on transgenics and SURPRISE (FP7, 2012-2015) on surveillance-oriented security technologies, a COST Action (IS1001, 2011-2014) on bio-objects.

He is currently member of the “Science and Democracy Network” coordinated by the University of Harvard, of the ENSSER (The European Network of Scientists for Social and Environmental Responsibility), of the EASST (the European Association for the study of Science and Technology) and founder, and active member, of the Spanish STS network (Red EsCTS).

In the past few years, Vincenzo Pavone has been visiting various international universities, such the UC Berkeley, York University, the Universidad de Chile and the Universidad Nacional de Quilmes in Argentina.

JOSÉ LUIS CURBELO

Research Fellow (Científico Titular)

PhD in Economics from University of California-Berkeley, M.Sc. University of Wisconsin-Madison and degree from Universidad del País Vasco-Bilbao. Research fellow on leave at CSIC-IPP, it is currently Dean of the Faculty of Law and Economics at Universidad Camilo José Cela

Recent selected publications include: Alvarez-Pelegty, E. Cardenete y Curbelo, J. (2011) El futuro de la Energía (Madrid: Marcial Pons); Curbelo, J. Parrilli, M.D. y Albulquerque, F. (2011) Territorios Innovadores y Competitivos (Madrid: Parcial Pons); Cooke, P. Parrilli, M.D. y Curbelo, J (2012) Innovation, Global Change and Territorial Resilience (Northampton: Edward Elgar); Curbelo, J. Scheifler, M. Cuadrado, J.R. (2016) Políticas Industriales para la Competitividad de España (Madrid: Revista de Economía)

He was Vice president of Strategies for Development and Public Policies and Chief Economicist at Banco de Desarrollo de América Latina (CAF) and Director General of Instituto Vasco de Competitividad-Orkestra. During ten years he was Investments Director at Compañía Española de Financiación del Desarrollo (COFIDES). He was Head of the Unit responsible for the development of Small and Medium Enterprises at Banco Interamericano de Desarrollo (BID) in Washington, DC. He has been professor of the universities of País Vasco, Sevilla, Federal de Minas Gerais in Belo Horizonte-Brasil, Carlos III in Madrid, etc. He has obtained important grants, including National Science Foundation and Newhouse in the United States, Juan March, Fulbright-Banco de Bilbao, etc. he has a long list of publications in innovation, competitiveness, and economic development, economy and international trade, regional and urban economics, etc. He has a broad knowledge in Latin America; often undertakes consulting and technical assistance projects in the region and collaborates with the media and the press.

Ph.D. in Philosophy and Letters (Geography and History) from the University of Granada since 1992. He is the main researcher of SCImago Research Group, which has carried out ambitious R+D projects including the “Scimago Journal & Country Rank-SJR” (a joint research effort with Elsevier-Scopus), and “Atlas de la Ciencia” (funded through the Spanish Ministry of Education and Science). At the moment, this project is expanding in Ibero-America, taking in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru, Portugal and Venezuela, and the geographical scope may be broadened in the near future; related projects are “Ranking Iberoamericano de Instituciones de Investigación-RI3” (with funding from Universia) and “Mi perfil Investigador-MPI” (with a subvention from the Fundación Española de Ciencia y Tecnología-FECYT). Collaboration with other research teams (Universidad de Extremadura, Universidad Carlos III, Universidad de Alcalá and Universitat Oberta de Catalunya) has been vital for the success of these projects.

The intensive research activity has led him to undersign a number of collaboration agreements with diverse national entities (FECYT, Junta de Andalucía, Principado de Asturias, Consorcio de Bibliotecas Públicas de Galicia, Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, and others) as well as international organizations (CONICYT, CONACYT, REDALyC, IESALC, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Valparaíso, Universidad de Antioquia...) that have contributed to in elaborating technical reports on internationally visible scientific output at different aggregate levels. He has also taken part in four European projects directly related with e-learning: VALUE: Vinculación y Valorización mutua entre universidades de America Latina y de la Union Europea. MASSIVE: Modelling Advice and Support Services to Integrate the Virtual component in Higher Education. VICTORIOUS: Virtual Curricula Through Reliable Inter Operating University Systems. And finally, REVE: Real Virtual Erasmus.

His professional career is based on two solid pillars: on the one hand, his outstanding research profile, giving rise to numerous papers in national and international journals of prestige and impact; and on the other hand, his work as director since 1989 at the University of Granada, first in charge of the School of Library and Information Science, and afterwards as Vice-rector of Service to the University Community. In December of 2007 he completed the mandate as Vice-rector of New Technologies. He is member of the Council of Directors of European Foundation for Quality in eLearning. Meanwhile, he has been part of the editorial committee of the journal Scientometrics, and acts as consultant for projects CINCEL of Chile, CONACYT of Mexico, and the BECYT project of Spain's Fundación Española de Ciencia y Tecnología.

His main lines of research are: Advanced techniques for information retrieval in the development of Information Systems in real time; Techniques for the visualization of scientific information oriented to the design of interfaces, and the analysis and evaluation of scientific domains; Scientometric analysis of different domains oriented toward the resolution of specific problems; and Information system design in the realm of scientometrics and in aiding decision-making processes.

PhD in Information Science from the University of Granada) (2005). She has a tenure position at Institute of Public Goods and Policies (IPP) of Spanish Research Council since 2008 in Madrid (Spain).

Her major research areas are focused on scholarly communication; analyses of different scientific domains for specific problem resolution; analysis and visualization of scientific information, with special emphasis in the scientific collaboration networks and its impact in scientific results; design and analysis of information systems to facilitate decision making processes; methodological proposals oriented to design and exploitation of scientometric indicators.

Member of the SCImago Research Group since its inception, she has participated in some of the group's most ambitious projects, including the: "SCImago Journal & Country Rank-SJR" and "SCImago Institutions Rankings-SIR" (as the result of a joint research effort and agreement with Elsevier-Scopus), "Atlas de la Ciencia" (funded by Ministry of Education and Science of Spain), a project which has expanded in Latin-America – Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru, Portugal and Venezuela – with potential for further expansion. Related project include "Ranking Iberoamericano de Instituciones de Investigación-RI3" (funded by Universia) and "Mi perfil investigador- MPI" (financed by the Fundación Española de Ciencia y Tecnología – FECYT, Spain).

The SCImago group has signed numerous cooperation agreements with various Spanish institutions, (Fundación Española para la Ciencia y la Tecnología, Junta de Andalucía, Principado de Asturias, Consorcio de Bibliotecas Públicas de Galicia, Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, Universidad del País Vasco/Euskal Herriko Unibertsitatea), as well as international (CONICYT, CONACYT, REDALyC, IESALC, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Valparaíso, Universidad de Antioquia, CEPAL, Elsevier, OECD), which has enabled the group to produce scientific reports on internationally visible scientific output for different aggregates. Zaida has actively participated in the drafting of more than 50 scientometric reports and developing methodologies, indicators and visual representations of scientific information systems developed by the SCImago Research Group

PhD in Documentation awarded by the University of Granada in 2007. Member of the SCImago research group since its inception, Elena Corera Álvarez has participated in some of the group's most ambitious projects, including the "Scimago Journal & Country Rank-SJR" (a joint research effort with Elsevier-Scopus), and "Atlas de la Ciencia" (funded by Spain's Ministry for Education and Science through the R&D&I project SEJ-2004-08358-C02-01/SOCI and Acción Complementaria SEJ2005-24008-E), a project which has expanded in Latin-America - Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru, Portugal and Venezuela - with potential for further expansion. Related projects include "Ranking Iberoamericano de Instituciones de Investigación-RI3" (funded by Universia) and "Mi perfil Investigador-MPI" (financed by the Fundación Española de Ciencia y Tecnología-FECYT). Elena is currently working on the creation of an institutional ranking system based on scientific output included in the Scopus database. These projects have been made possible thanks to close collaboration with research groups from other institutions (Universidad de Extremadura, Universidad Carlos III, Universidad de Alcalá and Universtitat Oberta de Catalunya).

The SCImago group is highly active, and as a consequence it has signed numerous cooperation agreements with various Spanish institutions, (FECYT, Junta de Andalucía, Principado de Asturias, Consorcio de Bibliotecas Públicas de Galicia, Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, Universidad del País Vasco/Euskal Herriko Unibertsitatea), as well as international institutions (CONICYT, CONACYT, REDALyC, IESALC, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Valparaíso, Universidad de Antioquia, CEPAL...), which has enabled the group to produce scientific reports on internationally visible scientific output for different aggregates. Elena has actively participated in two complementary tasks: the drafting of scientometric reports and coordinating the standardization of databases used to compile these reports, primarily regarding institutions, geographical locations and sectors.

Her major lines of investigation are: advanced information retrieval techniques for the development of real time information systems; interface design techniques for the visualization of scientific information; analysis and evaluation of scientific domains; scientometric analyses of different domains for specific problem resolution; and information system design for scientometrics to facilitate decision making processes.

He is working in the development of web indicators for describing and evaluating academic and research related contents and in the quantitative analysis of the processes of scholarly communication through the Internet. We are working on these topics since mid-nineties; starting in 1997 the edition of an all-electronic open access peer-reviewed journal, Cybermetrics, devoted to the publication of webometrics-related papers.. Editor of that journal, the first electronic journal of the CSIC, and also of the Rankings Web of Universities (since 2004), Research Centers (2006), Hospitals (2008), Business Schools (2008) and Repositories (2008), globally known as Webometrics Rankings. The web portal receives more than 5 million of visits from over 200 different countries every year.

He was appointed as a member of the CSIC delegation during the preparation of 5th Framework Program (1998-99) to the Spanish Office of Science and Technology (SOST) in Brussels. In 2002 I was invited as Metcalfe Visitor Fellow to the University of New South Wales (Sydney, Australia), for cooperation with the Bibliometric & Informetric Research Group (BIRG-UNSW) chaired by Dr Concepción S. Wilson and Dr Mari Davis. In 2009 he was granted Doctor Honoris Causa by the Universitas Indonesia, a recognition that he shared with other relevant scholars and the former Presidents of India, Indonesia, Philippines or Brunei.

His teaching related activities comprise about 300 workshops, seminars and conferences in more than 100 Universities and professional societies worldwide. His scientific contributions consists of publication of close to 100 papers and books chapters, fifty of them in high impact journals (My h-index is 9 and his Erdos number a nice 4) and participation in more than 60 Congresses and International Conferences, sometimes as keynote speaker or session chair or presenting over 100 communications and posters. Usually he gets invited to be member of the scientific committees or panels of these conferences. He was one of the proud organizers of the 11th Conference of the International Society for Scientometrics and Informetrics (Madrid, 2007).

He has led or contributed to several research projects funded by the Spanish government or by the European Commission through the Framework Programmes of R&D. Especially relevant have been the following ones: OpenAIRE (Repositories of the EU funded research), ACUMEN (Portfolio of scientific indicators for individuals); QEAVIS (eHumanities) or the Network of Excellence MA2VICMR of the Community of Madrid. He has also been member of several committees of experts of the Directorate General for Research (European Commission). He received the prize IWE 96 by ballot of the Spanish information scientists. His academic background includes a Licenciatura (MSc) in Biology (Zoology) by the Universidad Complutense de Madrid (1985), a Master en Información y Documentación (MID) by the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid and a Diploma de Estudios Avanzados (DEA) by the Universidad de Granada.
